

Press release 11

Dear AMMD,
Dear doctors,

On 22 June 2022, the Austrian online magazine "Wochenblick" published a major piece of information which had the effect of a small bomb abroad, but as so often, it was not even reported by the Luxembourgish press¹.

Answering a parliamentary question from FPÖ MP Gerald Hauser, Austrian Health Minister Johannes Rauch confirmed that doctors administering COVID-19 vaccines were obliged to inform their patients sufficiently in advance about the benefits and risks of the experimental treatment. Failure to do so could even result in fines of up to 14,000 euros for repeat offences².

The Austrian Health Minister's clarification is in line with the words of psychologist Roland Kolber ("Informed consent has always been necessary for any medical act.") and lawyer Christian Bock ("Informed consent, signed by the patient, removes the criminal nature of the treatment. An injection without informed consent is assimilated to an act of assault and battery and is therefore punishable.") at our 2nd Round Table on 11 March 2022³.

We therefore call on the Luxembourgish government to clarify the liability issues regarding COVID vaccinations and to make them transparent by means of an informed consent and civil and criminal liability form, so that both the patient and the doctor are informed of the consequences of their actions.
